

THE CYR BUILDING

177-179 Main Street ~ Map #4

Façade Improvement Grant program.

The Cyr Building was constructed in 1923 and, with 42 office suites, was the largest office building in Waterville at the time. It was put on the National Historic Register in 1982 for its Art Deco style architecture in a commercial context. Miller & Mayo of Portland designed the four stories of steel and concrete with brick veneer.

This building was the original location of the LaVerdiere Drug Store chain. The south facing windows on the first floor were sealed by the drug store in order to increase display space and were recently restored through the Waterville Main Street

This building now houses a café and a number of professional offices and businesses.
